SEAWEED COLLECTION

This collection was designed by Kayo Saito and made by the Flowering Desert project in India. Designer Maker, Kayo, has been running her own workshop since graduating from the Royal College of Art in 2001 and takes her inspiration from natural forms.

Seaweed was part of her upbringing in Japan and she continues to be fascinated by its beautiful forms as well as its nutritional and healing properties and planet-saving potential. Kayo visited the Flowering Desert project in February 2023 and ran workshops to teach the artisans new techniques, including doming, forming and different hammering skills. Ponni and Ramya now work together on this collection, with stunning results.

Made from brass with gold plated brass chain and gold plated brass earring hooks.

MEET THE ARTISANS. PERU

Hope Jewellery is our longest running partnership. We have been working with them since 2006, when Laura was introduced to the group whilst volunteering for another fair trade jewellery project in Lima, Peru.

From the beginning, Just Trade have worked hand in hand with Hope Jewellery to provide part time, fairly paid work that the women can do from home, or close to home. This kind of work is scarce and highly prized in Peru and has made a significant difference to the women's household incomes, meaning they have been able to improve their homes, pay for medical treatment and educate their children, as well as spend more time with their families.

The project is now based in four areas of Peru, two in the shanty towns of Lima (La Tablada and California) and two in the provincial cities of Ayacucho and Cajamarca. We are now providing regular work for more than forty women.

MEET THE ARTISANS. INDIA

In 2010, Grace and Lottie, two design graduates who were working with Just Trade, went to Southern India to visit the Flowering Desert Project after being introduced through VIA Design. The ladies in the project were all trained in tailoring, but were struggling to find enough regular work and hindered by intermittent power supply. We offered training in basic jewellery techniques using hand tools, therefore not requiring a reliable electricity source. The ladies picked up the techniques quickly, including beading, cutting, polishing and hammering. More recently, they have had further training in soldering and metal forming.

Around half of the women who work in the production unit live in the Mahalir Aran Trust (MAT) safe house on site, which is a refuge for vulnerable women and children. The rest of the women come from the surrounding rural community where work opportunities are limited to unpredictable and irregular work in agriculture.

At Flowering Desert, the ladies work in a fair, safe and supportive environment. They work a shorter day, are given free transportation to work, counselling, healthcare, advice on money management and help with educating their children.

MEET THE ARTISANS.
INDONESIA

In Indonesia, Just Trade works with diverse groups of artisan makers in East Java. Our first project with them was a collaboration through 'Making Links' (makinglinks5.com). The 'Elements' collection is a result of these first workshops.

The glass beads (known locally as 'manik-manik') are made from waste glass from a variety of sources, some from manufacturing waste, some collected by pickers from household rubbish, and the rest is unsold glass that is bought up in clearance sales. This glass is given a whole new lease of life when it is first of all ground up into 'frit', then melted, coloured and turned into rods before being shaped into beads and incorporated into these collections.

Two villages are involved in the production of the jewellery. In one village, Eko and his growing team (thanks to these collaborations) make all the brass pieces. They are transported to the second village where the glass beads are made by the men and the jewellery is assembled by the women bead weavers under the watchful eye of Mrs Nurwakit.

we work with at justtrade.co.uk

LUNA COLLECTION

The initial design and concept for this collection was developed by up and coming jewellery designer, Sophie Howard, currently studying at Sheffield Hallam University.

Sophie was inspired by Peruvian and Ecuadorian mythology to create these pieces, which are made collaboratively by artisans in Peru and Ecuador.

Lizet in Peru took Sophie's initial designs, experimented with scale and added texture to the brass, using techniques learnt in workshops carried out by Just Trade.

Magdalena in Ecuador refined the ideas for the tagua components, which she carves and polishes before sending them to Lizet for final assembly and packaging.

Made from brass and tagua with gold plated brass chain, gold plated brass earring hooks and sterling silver earring posts and butterflies.

MEET THE ARTISANS. ECUADOR

In 2010, after seeing the success of Just Trade's collaboration with artisans in Peru, Laura from Just Trade was contacted by the Ecuadorian embassy to meet with fair trade producers in Ecuador.

We are now working with five workshops, four of which specialise in a different traditional technique using tagua and one which uses traditional embroidery skills. Whilst Ecuador has many highly skilled artisans, they have seen global exports decrease over recent years as they are competing against the cheaper work force in Asia, where the cost of living is significantly lower. As a result, artisans compete over the local tourist market where they are often exploited by intermediaries who take advantage of the oversupply of handcraft products and demand increasingly lower prices. Just Trade have collaborated with these artisans to develop training programmes and design workshops enabling the production of unique jewellery that is suitable for export.

The project also works with artisans in provincial villages, employing over one hundred people in Hanoi and surrounding areas. This includes embroidery workshops in the Long Bien District and Co Chat, a screenprinting studio in Du Noi and a fabric dyeing workshop in NhaXa. These products help to sustain the artisans' traditional weaving heritage and also improve their lives by providing regular work and a fair wage.
